FRIDAY EVEN'G., SEPTEMBER 12.

FOR THE ALEXANDRIA GAZETTE. TO NANNIE IN HEAVEN. Bring flowers, fresh flowers, aye, bring them here, Strew them on an early bier, Bind them around the marble brow, Sleeping in death so calmly now; Fold them about the hands and breast, There, oh there, let the sweet things rest: Haste, gather 'round with noiseless tread, Take the last look of the beautiful dead.

In heaven at rest; oh cherished one, The thought doth still our weeping, Though thou so early wer't removed, And given to death's keeping. Within the shroud's pure fleecy folds, We laid thy peaceful bosom, And in thy waxen fingers placed, The pale rose, bud, and blossom.

Yet, scarcely can we deem thee gone! Within thy chamber lonely, The very echo hath a tone, That wakes thy memory only; We turn to catch the sparkling eyes, So meek in their appealing; We listen for thy low replies,

In soft sweet whispers stealing. In heaven at rest-here days of pain In feverish langour ending, 'Twas thine to bear, and wait in vain, Sleep's balm at eve descending. 'Twas thine to feel, through weary nights, From fitful dreams awaking, That only on the Heavenly Heights, For thee a morn was breaking.

Joy! when thy wasted frame, at last, Thrilled to the bridegroom's warning! We knew the halo o'er thee cast, . When burst that glorious morning. We knew it by thine eyes the while, Their radiant gleams were lying; We knew it by the saintly smile, That wreathed they lips in dying.

Oh, stainless spirit! when thy feet First passed the sapphire portal, Ere those thine own could'st scarcely greet In beauty grown immortal; What to thy quickened ear must seem The angel's song and story? Now on thine eye long-shadowed gleam

The white throned dazzling glory. For all the joys denied thee here, When joy denied was sorest, For every silent anguished tear, Dropped on the cross thou borest; For that dread suffering sweeter now, The rest that fills thy bosom; The thorns that pierced thy patient brow

We know that from that radiant land, Sometimes thy freed glance turneth; That o'er the home roof's lingering band, Thy loving spirit yearneth. Father! to thee one fervent prayer,

Bear each a golden blossom.

From heart and lips up swelleth, Room for us in that land prepare, Room where our loved one dwelleth. A RARE CHANCE FOR BARGAINS!
